Southern California Contractors Association (SCCA) Names Charlie Nobles, CAE Executive Director

Orange, CA, August 28, 2023 – The Southern California Contractors Association (SCCA) announced that Charlie Nobles will begin his role today as SCCA's Executive Director. An experienced C-level executive, Nobles has worked for various associations throughout his career including serving as the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of the International Right of Way Association, and the Executive Director of the American Sailing Association. In addition, he served as Chief Operating Officer of The Planetary Society.

In his new role as Executive Director, Nobles will be responsible for leading SCCA's dedicated team of professionals while growing the value of the organization to its members, sponsors, partners, and other stakeholders. He will lead efforts to expand the organization's programs while growing and strengthening its membership base.

Nobles brings extensive experience in association management, including strategic planning and extensive finance and operations management. In addition, he has many years of membership recruitment and engagement experience.

"Noble's strategic drive and his long, distinguished career in the association management community make him the perfect choice to lead SCCA into the next phase of its development," said John Gasparo, SCCA's President. "We're thrilled to welcome Charlie aboard."

"As a veteran association executive, I'm very excited to join SCCA, the leading organization for the construction industry in Southern California," said Nobles. "SCCA's commitment to professional development and member success mirrors my own values and I look forward to upholding the organization's strong priorities and expanding its reach."

The search was conducted by Vetted Solutions – specialists in executive search for purpose driven organizations.

About the Southern California Contractors Association
